Climate and Apparel for your stay

We do refer to Denver as the Mile High City, and you will be at an altitude of approximately 5280 feet. We advise you to take this into consideration while you are here, and if you start feeling altitude sickness (light-headedness, nausea, sleeping difficulty), let us know. It is important to drink a lot of water and limit your intake of caffeine and alcohol at least for the first day or two until your body adjusts to the altitude. To orient yourself, know that the mountains are west. The weather experiences all four seasons, but can change quickly. Plan ahead and check the weather online prior to your arrival so you will know what to pack. Sunscreen, lotion and lip balm are good items to have on hand. Generally, you will see a lot of sunshine in our state. Our office dress is business/business casual. For more information about Denver: <http://www.denver.org/about-denver/facts-info/weather/>
